CONCLUSIONS

1. On 5 March 1965 as we were handling CATIDE's OKASTELL the audio device referred to in Reference for the second time, he asked us whether it would be possible for CATIDE to purchase 2 each SRT 5 transmitters. He also asked at the same time what that type of gear would cost, when it could be made available, if at all, and whether it would be necessary to purchase also the SHR 4 type receivers in order to get a proper reception.
2. KASTELL stated that they had considered manufacturing such devices themselves or having them commercially made but found that the cost of such manufacture for only a few pieces would be prohibitive.
3. An early reply would be appreciated.
